the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a vision of a new mental health system, which will be based on the following principles:

- (i) People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and wishes.
- (ii) People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.
- (iii) People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes and communities.

the 1990s, the number of people who are employed in the service sector has increased in all countries. This is especially true for the United States, where the service sector has become the dominant sector of the economy.

There are several reasons for this. One reason is that the service sector has become more important for the economy. Another reason is that the service sector has become more attractive for workers. A third reason is that the service sector has become more important for the government. A fourth reason is that the service sector has become more important for the environment.

The service sector has become more important for the economy because it has become the dominant sector. This is especially true for the United States, where the service sector has become the dominant sector of the economy. This is also true for other developed countries.

The service sector has become more attractive for workers because it offers better working conditions. This is especially true for the United States, where the service sector has become the dominant sector of the economy. This is also true for other developed countries.

the 1990s, the number of people who are employed in the service sector has increased in all countries.

There are two reasons why the service sector is important for the economy. First, it is the largest sector in all countries. Second, it is the most dynamic sector. The service sector is growing faster than the other sectors in all countries.
